

GEORGE S. MOWER

Resolutions of Deimar Reunion offered by C. J. Ramage, Esq.

I wish to express the sense of this gathering of Summerland and Newberry college people of the deep loss we have sustained in the death of Hon. Geo. S. Mower, so long a member of the board of trustees and always the friend of the faculty and student body. Though belonging to another denomination, has placed the Lutheran church in South Carolina and Georgia under a lasting debt of obligation by the assistance he has always cheerfully supplied in every way in his power.

His Christian love was so broad that it embraced every worthy cause; it would have been impossible for Dr. Mower to have harbored any feeling in his breast save that which was good, fine, noble and elevating. To quote the words of Daniel Webster as applied to Mr. Calhoun: "Nothing low or meanly selfish ever came near the head or heart of George S. Mower. Rich and poor, black and white, high and low all mingled their tears around his open grave."

No man ever exemplified in his own life to a greater degree the sacred meaning of friendship. With a nature as open as the day and with a heart of melting charity, it is no wonder that Mr. Mower was beloved by all. He was so genial, gentle and cordial. His face was an index of the character of the man—nothing dark or hidden there. His sympathies were to human and broad. To him every man was indeed and in truth a brother. Dr. Frank E. Harrison of Abbeville stated that Mr. Mower was the best loved man in the Masonic fraternity in this state. His beaming face, his cheery smile, his hearty hand grasp, his kindly voice are now a treasured memory with all of us. He is absent in the flesh but his work and influence abide. George S. Mower in the spirit land will need no kind of purification to fit him for companionship with the good.

He leaves a fragrant memory of good deeds, kind words and token of friendship. He could look forward to the untried and unknown with no sort of misgiving. The splendid old pagan philosopher said: "For the good man there can be no fear." The inspired apostle exclaimed: "And now abide faith, hope and charity, but the greatest of these is charity."
